Then they adjourned to the barn, which had been appropriately decorated, for the entertainment of the children, who had signed the pledge in the Sunday school. About forty children formed in a march at the Methodist church and marched to the lawn to the tune of "O'ward, Christian Soldiers," carrying flags and red, white and blue pledge chains, which they had signed, and bailed in front of the barn, where they sang patriotic and temperance selections and gave an appropriate rally cry.

Circus Comes to Town.

The presentation of a circus in Norway by the Frank A. Robbins Co., drew a large crowd of people from all the surrounding towns as is customary and Thursday forenoon there was a large crowd upon the streets. The circus train arrived at the South Paris station at about 8 o'clock and the work of unloading proceeded rapidly. The work went forward with a rush in the military precision of manner which is characteristic of such shows.

The parade started just before noon, the procession passing on Main street a little after 12 o'clock. It was not a great or lengthy showing but was a clean looking class of men, the animals appearing in good condition and made a good appearance.

There was a large crowd at the afternoon performance, a smaller one in the evening composed almost entirely of people of the two villages.

Excellent features were presented and in a very good manner and everyone was satisfied with the show. The most noteworthy features were a fine bicycle act by a man and two women, in which a great number of very difficult feats were performed. The loop-the-loop bicycle act was thrilling in the extreme.

Fine horizontal bar acts were shown, and a very interesting act was the hanging by the teeth of a woman from a rope. Fine horseback riding acts were also put on in the two rings. A good act was a dog walking a parallel wire.

The menagerie was small but was a very interesting exhibition. Nothing in the slightest degree questionable was presented in the menagerie. Sideshows were also given and the impression made by the circus was very good.

NORWAY AND VICINITY.

Pigeons Rather Teammasters.

Teamsters who have to handle grain from the cars at the Grand Trunk freight depot have the life pestered out of them these days by the great flock of pigeons which make their headquarters in the empty buildings nearby. Until Cummings' grist mill was erected there a few years ago a pigeon was as scarce near the depot as white blackbirds, but with the erection of the mill the pigeons discovered a choice feeding place and commenced to nest there. The first year but five pairs of pigeons were seen near the depot, but this summer after they had finished breeding, there were nearly 400 flying around the cars.

As soon as a freight car containing grain is opened the pigeons fly down from nearby roofs, which in spare moments are their points of vantage, and fight for places of supremacy on the grain. At every opportunity the pigeons fly into the cars, and when the last load is hauled away swoop down on the car and clean up the inside as though swept with a broom.

Fatal Injuries.

Bert Kneeland of Cornish died on the operating table at the Maine General Hospital about noon, Saturday, as the result of an accident of the day before. He was a former resident of Harrison, a son of Ira Kneeland and was 29 years old.

He went to Harrison to attend the centennial observance Thursday. Friday he visited one of the saw mills and was watching a stove boiler when a piece of wood flew from this machine striking him in the abdomen.

He was taken to the hospital Saturday noon but did not start the journey well, being unconscious most of the way down and died shortly after his arrival.

Mrs. J. D. Howe of Otisfield and Mrs. Jones W. Ramsdell of Lynn, Mass. attended the centennial at Harrison which was a very enjoyable occasion, especially to Mrs. Ramsdell as it was her native town.

accompanist. The solo, "We Were I the Streamlet," by Mr. Tower especially received much praise.

Grace Gray Pagsley read a fine original centennial poem, A. E. Morse of South Paris recited several selections, in his usual inimitable manner. The closing address was by Judge J. H. Tolman of Westbrook, a native of Harrison. His speech was a revival of memories of the town and people.

The literary exercises of the day closed with the singing of the Centennial Ode written by Mrs. Harriet Farwell of Bethel and sung to the tune of Maryland, My Maryland.

The Carnival.

Camp Katahdin, Camp Kineo and Long Lake Lodge were represented in the aquatic sports. A. M. Burgess won the swimming match for boys over 15. For boys under 15, Maxwell M. Barnes won first and Diederich Abbes second. The swimming race was won by H. W. Littlefield, the canoe race by H. A. Cobb and Henry Hart.

The prizes were silver cups. A large silver cup was given to the best display of fireworks in the evening carnival and this was easily won by Wilson's.

A brilliant display of fireworks in the evening fully closed the greatest day Harrison has ever known, a celebration in which there was not one failure but every event was a distinguished success.

Notes.

The crown was variously estimated at from 4,000 to 5,000. 3,000 free dinners were served at the town hall and the two vestries.

Among the octogenarians on the platform we noticed Mrs. Katherine Whitney, Mrs. Sam'l Pitts, Mellen Thomas, John Johnson. It was regretted that Mrs. Dorcas Kneeland, the oldest resident of the village, was unable to attend the exercises.

The oldest house in Harrison is the Floyd house, now occupied by Alfred Libby.

Among former residents who were "home" for Centennial week was Judge Tolman and wife, Westbrook; Judge Kimball and wife, Gorham; Cyrus H. Pierce, Somerville, Mass., the great grandson of pioneer, George Pierce; John Woodsum and daughter, Mrs. Eugene Spaulding, Portland, Me.; S. Pitts Stanton of New Hampshire, and Christine Pitts Willard of Kennebunkport; Frank Sampson, Portland.

Sheriff Fennell was present, but the large crowd was so orderly that he found no call for his services. There were no accidents, and no losses were reported, except that of one large pocketbook—empty.

The ball game between Harrison and Naples was won by the team, 9 to 2, Naples scoring both runs in the ninth.

Our Summer Resorts.

We presume if a list of all summer residents who are sojourning in Maine the present season, either in their own mansion or cottage, or at some of the more popular hotels, it would embrace many names more than can be found in the pages of the Advertiser. Any state in the entire country east of the Mississippi river. The list would include eminent statesmen and jurists, distinguished army and navy officers, great financiers and business men—multi-millionaires, many actors, popular actors, artists and authors, whose names are known throughout the country, with scores upon scores of others noted in the great financial, social and intellectual centers of the United States.

There is but one State of Maine—the nation's playground in summer. There is but one Kineo, but one Poland Spring, but one Bar Harbor—gem of the nation's watering places—but there are hundreds of other, many of them, in Maine, which add to the summer glory of Maine and which receive the choicest selection of that large class of people who seek health and recreation in our delightful, healthful, invigorating summer climate—the ideal climate of the nation and eastern part of this great nation.

The World's Largest Egg Farm.

What is said to be the largest egg farm in the world is owned and managed by C. E. L. Hayward at Hancock, N. H. It has now over 5,400 hens, kept in 60 small houses, each with 90 hens.

The hens are never allowed outside their little eight foot square coops and are never fed green feed, contrary to the teachings of all other poultry keepers. Each hen gets about a quarter of a pound per day of beef scraps, gluten hominy feed, wheat, etc., with a little salt, ground shells, grit and charcoal and plenty of clean water. They average 100 eggs each during the year, for which the high average of 28 cents a dozen is received, or a total of $217.

It costs about $1.17 each for feed, so that the profit on each hen is about $1. Only young hens are kept. The second year they are sold, and pullets are bought for the next year's egg crop.

Raising Ducks on the Farm.

The farmer with his acres of range and feed, grown at lower cost than produce ducks at much less expense than the exclusive duck raiser, says H. A. Nourse in Reliable Poultry Journal. That the latter finds the work profitable his continuance in the work year after year, with constantly increasing business and no other source of revenue, amply testifies. Then if the farmer can produce the same quality at less cost and sell it for the same price, and he certainly can if he earnestly tries, the difference in cost represents pretty closely the increased profit within the farmer's reach to be secured by no more application than he yearly devotes to other branches of farm industry which offer less reward.

Small Flocks Pay Best.

The most profit is made in the keeping of poultry in small flocks. We know personally of a number who are handling from 300 to 500 laying hens and making from $1 to $1.50 each as a return for their labor during the year. The thrifty, careful individual, either man or woman, who thoroughly understands the care of laying hens can manage as many as 600 profitably and be able to do this throughout the year. But whenever one attempts to handle larger flocks than these the care and expense of handling rises in as great disadvantage or drawback to large profits.—Country Gentleman.

Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's

Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womanhood is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructive ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and are fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to cure nervous prostration or female ill, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Fitchburg, Mass., writes:

"It gives me great pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties."

"My old daughter found it very beneficial for uterine troubles some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength."

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject, and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhoea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration, or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and then write to Mrs. Pinkham at 123 Mass. St., Boston, for free advice. No living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should ask for and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

One Bound Over.

The Other Discharged.

Salvatore Precodio and Antonio Smodelo were up before the Municipal court Tuesday to answer to the charge of assault with intent to kill upon Josephine Drucisco and her husband, Francisco.

James B. Stevenson appeared for the State and Matthew McCarthy Esq. for the respondent. The complainants testified that while Josephine and Francisco were returning from the store of Lorenzo Lavagna, where they had been beer, they were attacked by Smodelo and a light ensued, in which Smodelo slashed Francisco with a razor on the shoulder, and then ran to the shanty of Salvatore Precodio. Josephine and Francisco followed him and tried to dislodge him from his friends protection and while doing so Salvatore fired from the window at Josephine.

The defense showed that Josephine and her husband were considerably intoxicated and were in front of Antonio's shanty when he went to the store to buy some provisions. As he passed them, Francisco being in a fighting mood picked up a quarrel with him. Antonio was struck in the neck, received a black eye, a vicious bite on the biceps of his right arm. His fingers were out, and according to the evidence, was caused by a knife in the hands of Francisco.

It was brought out that Josephine and her husband followed Antonio to a friends shanty, battered windows and doors with rocks and clubs, and Josephine is not contented with that, went to her own shanty, got a revolver and fired one shot through the window. Antonio and his friend finally made their escape from the shanty and were arrested at the settlement known as Virginia located just above Rumford Falls.

At the close of the hearing Precodio was discharged on the ground that he had a right to protect his life and his building and as it was doubted by the judge if he did fire a shot, Smodelo was ordered committed and held for $300 is furnished, to await the action of the October term of the Supreme court.

There was a large crowd at the afternoon performance, a smaller one in the evening composed almost entirely of people of the two villages.

Excellent features were presented and in a very good manner and everyone was satisfied with the show. The most noteworthy features were a fine bicycle act by a man and two women, in which a great number of very difficult feats were performed. The leap-the-chasm bicycle act was thrilling in the extreme.

A fine horizontal bar act was shown, and a very interesting act was the hanging by the teeth of a woman from a rope. Fine horseback riding acts were also put on in the two rings. A good act was a dog walking a parallel wire.

The menagerie was small but was a very interesting exhibition. Nothing in the slightest degree questionable was presented in the main show. Side shows were also given and the impression made by the circus was very good.

NORWAY AND VICINITY.

Pigeons Bother Teamsters.

Teamsters who have to handle grain from the cars at the Grand Trunk freight depot have the life pestered out of them these days by the great flock of pigeons which make their headquarters in the empty buildings nearby. Until Cummings' grist mill was erected there a few years ago a pigeon was as scarce near the depot as white blackbirds, but with the erection of the mill the pigeons discovered a choice feeding place and commenced to nest there. The first year but five pairs of pigeons were seen near the depot, but this summer after they had finished breeding, there were nearly 400 flying around the cars.

As soon as a freight car containing grain is opened the pigeons fly down from nearby roofs, which in spare moments are their points of vantage, and fight for places of supremacy on the grain. At every opportunity the pigeons fly into the cars and when the last load is hauled away swoop down on the car and clean up the inside as though swept with a broom.

Fatal Injuries.

Bert Kneeland of Cornish died on the operating table at the Maine General Hospital about noon, Saturday, as the result of an accident of the day before. He was a former resident of Harrison, a son of Ira Kneeland and was 29 years old.

He went to Harrison to attend the centennial observance Thursday. Friday he visited one of the saw mills and, while watching a stove boiler when a piece of wood flew from this machine striking him in the abdomen.

He was taken to the hospital Saturday noon but did not stand the journey well, being unconscious most of the way down and died shortly after his arrival.

Mrs. J. D. Howe of Otisfield and Mrs. James W. Ramsdell of Lynn, Mass., attended the centennial at Harrison which was a very enjoyable occasion, especially to Mrs. Ramsdell as it was her native town.

Centennial at Harrison.

accompanist. The solo, Where I the Streamlet, by Mr. Towar especially received much praise.

Grace Bray Pugsley read a fine original centennial poem, A. E. Morse of South Paris recited several selections in his usual inimitable manner. The closing address was by Judge J. H. Tolman of Westbrook, a native of Harrison. His speech was a revival of memories of the town and people.

The literary exercises of the day closed with the singing of the Centennial Ode written by Mrs. Harriet Farwell of Bethel and sung to the tune of Maryland, My Maryland.

The Carnival.

Camp Katahdin, Camp Kineo and Long Lake Lodge were represented in the aquatic sports. A. M. Burgess won the swimming match for boys over 15. For boys under 15, Maxwell M. Barnes won first and Deidrick Abbes second. The spring race was won by H. W. Littlefield; the canoe race by H. A. Cobb and Henry Hart.

The prizes were silver cups. A large silver cup was given to the best display of fireworks in the evening carnival and this was easily won by Wilson's.

A brilliant display of fireworks in the evening fully closed the greatest day Harrison has ever known, a celebration in which there was not one failure but every event was a distinguished success.

Notes.

The crown was variously estimated at from 4,000 to 5,000. 3,000 free dinners were served at the town hall and the two vestries.

Among the octogenarians on the platform we noticed Mrs. Katherine Whitney, Mrs. Sam'l Pitts, Mellen Thomas, John Johnson. It was regretted that Mrs. Dorcas Kneeland, the oldest resident of the village, was unable to attend the exercises.

The oldest house in Harrison, is the Floyd house, now occupied by Alfred Libby.

Among former residents who were "home" for Centennial week, notice Judge Tolman and wife, Westbrook; Judge Kimball and wife, Gorham; Cyrus H. Pierce, Somerville, Mass., the great grandson of pioneer, George Pierce; John Woodsum, Portland; Geo. S. Pitts, Bangor and daughters, Susan Pitts Stanton of New Hampshire, and Christine Pitts Willard of Kennebunkport; Frank Sampson, Portland.

Shortage of money was present, but the large crowd was so orderly that he found no call for his services. There were no accidents and no losses were reported, except that of one large, pocketbook—empty.

The ball game between Harrison and Naples was won by the home team, 9 to 2. Naples scoring both runs in the ninth.

Our Summer Resorts.

We presume if a list of all summer residents who are sojourning in Maine the present season, either in their own mansion or cottage, or at some of the many popular hotels, it would embrace more eminent names than can be found recorded at the summer resorts of any state in the entire country east of the Mississippi river. The list would include eminent statesmen and jurists, distinguished army and navy officers, great financiers and business men—multi-millionaires, many of them regular actors and artists and authors, whose names are known throughout the country, with scores upon scores of others noted in the great financial, social and intellectual centers of the United States.

There is but one state of Maine—the nation's playground in summer. There is but one Kineo, but one Poland Spring, but one Bar Harbor—gem of the nation's watering places—but there are hundreds of lake, seashore and mountain resorts which add to the summer glory of Maine and which receive the choicest selection of that large class of people who seek health and recreation in our delightful, healthful, invigorating summer climate—the ideal climate of the mid-section and eastern part of this great nation.

The World's Largest Egg Farm.

What is said to be the largest egg farm in the world is owned and managed by C. E. L. Hayward at Hancock, N. H. It has now over 3,400 hens, kept in 600 small houses, fourteen in each.

The hens are never allowed outside their little eight foot square coops and are never fed green feed, contrary to the teachings of all other poultry keepers. Each hen gets about a quarter of a pound per day of beef scraps, gluten hominy feed, wheat, etc., with a little salt, ground shells, grit and charcoal and plenty of clean water. They average 100 eggs each during the year, for which the high average of 26 cents a dozen is received, or a total of $247. It costs about $1.17 each for feed, so that the profit on each hen is about $1. Only young hens are kept. The second year they are sold, and pullets are bought for the next year's egg crop.

Raising Ducks on the Farm.

The farmer with his acres of range and feed, grown at lower cost, can produce ducks at much less expense than the exclusive duck raiser, says J. A. Nourse in Reliable Poultry Journal. That the latter finds the work profitable his continuance in the work year after year, with constantly increasing business and no other source of revenue, amply testifies. Then if the farmer can produce the same quality at less cost and sell it for the same price, and he certainly can if he earnestly tries, the difference in cost represents pretty closely the increased profit within the farmer's reach to be secured by no more application than he yearly devotes to other branches of farm industry which offer less reward.

Small Flocks Pay Best.

The most profit is made in the keeping of poultry in small flocks. It is known personally of a number who are handling from 300 to 500 laying hens and making from $1 to $1.50 each as a return for their labor during the year. The thrifty, careful individual, either man or woman, who thoroughly understands the care of laying hens can manage as many as 600 profitably and be able to do this throughout the year. But whenever one attempts to handle larger flocks than these the care and expense of handling creep in as a disadvantage, or drawback to large profits.—Country Gentleman.

Doctor Brigham Says

MANY PHYSICIANS PRESCRIBE

Lydia E. Pinkham's

Vegetable Compound

The wonderful power of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound over the diseases of womanhood is not because it is a stimulant, not because it is a palliative, but simply because it is the most wonderful tonic and reconstructive ever discovered to act directly upon the generative organs, positively curing disease and restoring health and vigor.

Marvelous cures are reported from all parts of the country by women who have been cured, trained nurses who have witnessed cures and physicians who have recognized the virtue of Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound as a fair enough to give credit where it is due.

If physicians dared to be frank and open, hundreds of them would acknowledge that they constantly prescribe Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound in severe cases of female ills, as they know by experience it can be relied upon to effect a cure. The following letter proves it.

Dr. S. C. Brigham, of 4 Brigham Park, Newburgh, Mass., writes:

"I give the greatest pleasure to say that I have found Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound very efficacious, and often prescribe it in my practice for female difficulties."

"My oldest daughter found it very beneficial for uterine trouble some time ago, and my youngest daughter is now taking it for a female weakness, and is surely gaining in health and strength."

"I freely advocate it as a most reliable specific in all diseases to which women are subject and give it honest endorsement."

Women who are troubled with painful or irregular menstruation, bloating (or flatulence), leucorrhoea, falling, inflammation or ulceration of the uterus, ovarian troubles, that bearing-down feeling, dizziness, faintness, indigestion, nervous prostration or the blues, should take immediate action to ward off the serious consequences, and be restored to perfect health and strength by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, which will cure the trouble, at Lynn, Mass., for further free advice. No living person has had the benefit of a wider experience in treating female ills. She has guided thousands to health. Every suffering woman should read and follow her advice if she wants to be strong and well.

The Other Discharged.

Salvatore Precodio and Antonio Smodello were up before the Municipal court Tuesday to answer to the charge of assault with intent to kill upon Josephine Druccio and her husband, Francisco. James B. Stevenson appeared for the State and Matthew McCarthy Esq. for the respondents. The complainants testified that while Josephine and Francisco were returning from the store of Lorenzo Lavagna, where they had been beer, they were attacked by Smodello and a night ensued, in which Smodello slashed Francisco with a razor on the shoulder, and then ran to the shanty of Salvatore Precodio. Josephine and Francisco followed him and tried to dislodge him from his friends protection and while doing so Salvatore fired from the window at Josephine.

The defense showed that Josephine and her husband were considerably intoxicated and were in front of Antonio's shanty when he went to the store to buy some provisions. As he passed them, Francisco being in a fighting mood picked up a quarrel with him. Antonio was struck in the neck, received a black eye, a vicious bite on the biceps of his right arm. His fingers were cut, and according to the evidence, was caused by a knife in the hands of Francisco.

It was brought out that Josephine and her husband followed Antonio to a friends shanty, battered windows and doors with rocks and clubs, and Josephine is not contented with this want to; her own shanty, got a revolver and fired one shot through the window. Antonio and his friend finally made their escape from the shanty and were arrested at the settlement known as Virginia located just above Rumford Falls.

At the close of the hearing Precodio was discharged on the ground that he had a right to protect his life and his building and as it was doubted by the judge if he did fire a shot. Smodello was ordered committed until bail for $300 is furnished, to await the action of the October term of the Supreme court.

Under $1000 Bonds.

Monday in the Rumford Falls Municipal court was assigned Mrs. Ida Flagg, arrested Saturday afternoon upon complaint of her husband, John Flagg, who claimed that she tried to poison him. Probable cause was found by Judge Johnson and the woman was placed under $1,000 bonds for her appearance before the October term of the Supreme Court.

Stephenson, Gleason & Blanchard appeared for the woman while the complainant had no counsel except that offered by Judge Johnson.

Mr. Flagg testified to his wife getting his breakfast Saturday morning and putting up his lunch in his dinner pail. While on his way to work he said that he became thirsty and taking out the coffee in his dinner pail started to drink some. In taking out the coffee, a little was spilled on the side and a peculiar green color was noticed. Upon examination he discovered that there was a quantity of Paris green in the coffee. Although he did not drink any coffee then, later he began to feel ill and accounted for it by believing that his wife had put poison into the coffee which he had for breakfast.

On cross examination it was brought out that Mr. and Mrs. Flagg and their daughter were stopping with Carrie Flagg last winter and one day in February that John, the girl and Carrie Flagg were all taken ill and that Dr. Hutchins pronounced the cause to be morphine poisoning. It was brought out that Carrie Flagg was more or less addicted to the use of morphine.

Something rather sensational was brought out when the defense attempted to show that exceedingly friendly relations existed between Carrie Flagg and John, but most of this was ruled out by the court as not bearing on the case.

The defense also endeavored to show that John Flagg was the only one in his household who knew where the Paris Green was kept and that he placed the stuff in his pail, the motive being to get rid of his wife.

The Local Paper First.

Hearst's Chicago American of a recent issue contained the following editorial, which has created no little comment on the part of the press generally because of the fact that it shows a spirit of unusual fairness which will always commend itself to fair minded people. It says:

"It would be a misfortune to the country if the few big papers in the big cities should interfere seriously with the publication of the valuable and intelligent local newspapers—for upon these local newspapers the welfare of the country very largely depends. The metropolitan daily cannot possibly know the needs of the various localities and small citizens. Only the local newspaper can protect the local needs and influence local opinion. Of course we were very glad to have as many people as possible read the Chicago American in the big cities and the little cities. But we hope that in every small town and every village there will be enough intelligence and public spirit on the part of the local inhabitants to support earnestly and enthusiastically the best local newspaper, giving encouraging approbation and a good living to the local editor, who alone can represent and defend justice and public spirit among his neighbors. The man is unfortunate who cannot afford to take two newspapers at to-day's prices. He who can afford only one newspaper, let his opinion be as good as his sense of duty to his locality by taking the local newspaper."

Thousands Have Kidney Trouble and Never Suspect It.

How to Find Out.
Fill a bottle or common glass with your water and let it stand twenty-four hours; sediment or settling indicates an unhealthy condition of the kidneys; if it stains your linen it is evidence of kidney trouble; too frequent desire to pass it or pain in the back is also convincing proof that the kidneys and bladder are out of order.

What to Do.
There is comfort in the knowledge so often expressed, that Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, the great kidney remedy, fulfills every wish in curing rheumatism, pain in the back, kidneys, liver, bladder and every part of the urinary passage. It corrects inability to hold water and scalding pain in passing it, or bad effects following use of liquor, wine or beer, and overcomes that unpleasant necessity of being compelled to go often during the day, and to get up many times during the night. The mild and the extraordinary effect of Swamp-Root is soon realized. It stands the highest for its wonderful cures of the most distressing cases. If you need a medicine, you should have the best. Sold by druggists in fifty-cent and one-dollar sizes.

You may have a sample bottle and a book that tells all about it, both sent free by mail. Address Dr. Kilmer & Co., Binghamton, N. Y. When writing mention this paper and don't make any mistake, but remember the name, Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, and the address, Binghamton, N. Y.

PORTER— A Big Snake.

July 25, as Lewis Thompson and Simon Day were mowing on the Sawyer farm they saw a big black snake. There was a double wall some ten rods away so he started to go and get the snake. First, Mr. Day is 65 years old and he says it was the biggest snake he ever saw. He must have been 6 or 7 feet long. Mr. Day says that if such snakes will let him alone he won't trouble them.

Most of the farmers have finished their haying.

Trials of a Loaner.

Are you a book collector or a book borrower? The summer collector belongs to one of two classes.

The book collector and lover lays forth his favorite volume before her wardrobe is brought out for packing. She puts her toilet articles on one side of her bag or suit case and the other magazines and reviews on the other. Then she spends part of her vacation feeding the borrowers and securing the return of books from borrowers too crafty to be denied.

Numerous were the devices employed by book lovers for retaining and recovering their beloved possessions; for be it known the true book lover has a dual nature. He dislikes to loan books, because he fears they will be injured or lost, yet he loves to see his favorites appreciated and longs to introduce them to readers who have never known them.

Nearly every collector has his book plate in this age of cheap engraving. This may consist of a die showing his monogram or his name in full, or a combination of name and family crest, if so fortunate he be as to possess a crest.

Such a reminder of book's owner pasted inside the cover can be engraved for about a dollar and the plate will cost any where from $20 to $100. Real faddists in book plates have fanciful designs, such as a man seated by his fireside, pipe in hand reading. Such artists as Maxfield Parrish and Henry Hutt receive costly orders for book plate designs.

Women in particular have their own ways of marking their property. A real book worm, who has gathered some rare editions in Paris has had made a tiny rubber stamp with name and address and she stamps these books, not only on the inside of the cover but at the tail of each chapter.

Another girl has pasted in the front of each book a couple of fly leaves, headed with little designs of her own, and ink work, asking borrowers to write a ten word criticism of the story on one of those leaves. She takes great pleasure, and oftentimes amusement from their criticisms.

One college girl who always takes a stack of books on her vacation has had this rubber stamp made for marking the fly leaf of each book: "The wicked man borroweth, but returneth not."

The all-year suburbanite suffers from the demands of the summer suburbans who never count books among her hot weather furnishings. One woman who lives in the outskirts of Chicago and has a large library turns the keys of the latter over to her second daughter, who keeps a record of every book loaned and asks its return within a reasonable time.

The neighbors who consider this most discourteous treatment, are the very ones who forget that they ever borrowed a book, who loan it to a party with whom they are acquainted, who turn down, leaves to mark the place, who leave the book open and face downward rather than slip a marker in between the pages, or who set a glass of water or a plate of ice cream on the closed book, moistening its pretty cover until the colors run. Such are the sins of the summer book borrower and those of the book lender.

A View of the Past.

As the darkness is gently gathering around me, and I watch the sun go down my thoughts go back to my girlhood home. I can see the old house and the familiar stables; the budding cedars and the paths I loved to follow in and out among the rocks and knolls. I loved them all and when a day came that I had a few hours leisure, it always found me among them.

I was content with my home, content with my school, and if I could not dress as well as some of my schoolmates I was better off than many of them. I was proud of a new dress from my mother, I was proud of a new powder than I would be of a queen's crown today, for gold and precious stones have no charm for me now; I would rather spend one afternoon on the old river than own them all.

It was there I shed my tears over a broken toy, and it was there that I planned my future life—all so different from what it really was. On its green banks I sat on an old mossy log and learned my lesson for the schoolroom.

I wrote my compositions or I gazed on the opposite bank, wondering if the same flowers bloomed over there that I saw near me.

Again, while crooning to my doll, I watched her gather wood from the brook, springing eagerly to the shore to assist him in tiding it on the bank, and then gather clam shells while waiting for the next boatload to come in. And last spring I gathered cedar there for that same father's grave.

The same old river has run on and on for years; the same old trees have stretched their proud heads to view themselves in its wavy mirror, but I feel that I can safely say that none have enjoyed its beautiful scenery as I did in the past, and none will cherish its sweet memory more vividly in the future than I shall, and when the beautiful river of life eternal stretches before me, may I be as eager to climb its solemn, beautiful banks.

A good laugh brightens the world like sunshine. It freshens the atmosphere like a breeze. When you feel downcast or a little injured, when you are inclined to feel sorry for yourself, see what the laughter cure will do. Treat the little bothers like a joke. Laugh them away.

In the Woods.

How a Woman May Enjoy Camping in the Wilderness.

A writer in the Outing says: The average woman knows very little about the woods that the woods do not appeal to her. One does not have to look far to see the reason for this, as the average girl is taught, among other things, that it is not good form and, in fact, that it is more or less "unwomanly" to go into the woods. She is given to understand that the forest is for boys and not for girls, except in cases where the Sunday school picnic goes to the woods bodily.

This is a wrong view and an unhealthy one. There is no doubt in my mind that it would be better for the growing girls if they were encouraged to indulge more in out-door sports. I know for my own part that one only has to learn to enjoy one's self in order to create a longing for the wilderness.

As far as my experience goes the loneliness of the woods is largely imaginary, and in reality, Nature is never lonesome after one has learned her ways.

The average summer camper who goes out for a few weeks or days usually starts wrong and instead of resting and enjoying themselves they succeed in wearing themselves out and so come home exhaustedly trying to account the wilderness of being a lonesome place that is unkind to them; a place of bugs and stickers, of mysterious noises and crawling snaky things.

This, however, is not the fault of the wilderness, but a state of affairs due entirely to ignorance on the part of the campers. How can they expect to know the out-of-doors in a week? To know it intimately one must study it for years, and even then one cannot learn it by only going in the sunshiny weather.

Each day and night, each variety of weather has its own particular charm, and one must see it all to get the good of it.

Given a suitable outfit, a woman is as free to go and come in the wilderness as a man. This is the first item in learning to enjoy the wild places, because it takes away the worry that is occasioned by a costume that does not fit the requirements of the work in hand.

Given personal comfort, the next important item to consider is proper food and its preparation together with comfortable shelter.

Experience is the very best teacher to study under in this matter as it also is in others.

Making a camp comfortable and cooking over an out-door fire are matters more easily managed.

In regard to cooking, bear in mind that the best results are always obtained over a small fire that has burned down to a bed of coals. Also remember that this fire should never be built against a tree or other obstacle, because if the wind does not have a free unbroken channel to blow across, you will always have a smoke in your eyes and a short temper.

The making of a comfortable camp bed is not a very difficult matter, the great trouble being that it is usually considered finished at about the point where it is just begun.

Green leaves and "mountain feathers" are usually deceitful in appearance, so that what looks to be a good soft bed will develop low places and bumps on every size and shape when you try to sleep on it.

There is just one way to make a comfortable camp bed: have the men cut a couple of arm-loads of slender, straight poles the size of your finger, lay these side by side evenly on the ground to be covered by the bed. They should be laid about an inch apart and then another layer laid crosswise on top of them in the same manner. You can have two or more layers; the more you use the better your bed will be, because these poles make your spring mattress.

When this mattress is done see that leaves and very small twigs are evenly piled on top of it until they are three feet or more in depth.

Over these spread an oiled muslin sheet and then spread your blankets on top of the sheet, which should be made long, like a double blanket, so that it can be pulled up over the blankets and used for your bedspread.

This oiled muslin sheet is a very important part of your outfit, because it keeps the dampness from coming up from the ground and it is also waterproof and wind proof, and therefore warm and pulled over the blankets.

You can make it easily by simply buying four yards of unbleached double-width sheeting, hemming it up as you would a sheet and then having it oiled with linseed oil, which should be rubbed into the cloth by hand and not painted on with a brush.

Cleaning camp dishes is one of the bugaboos of camp life, yet it is a very simple process. I turn this job over to my husband, who takes the dirty grease from the pan and other cooking utensils down to the creek, where there is plenty of moss and sandy mud, and there with his pipe a light, he sits complacently down on a convenient rock and begins by throwing a handful of mud into the frying-pan. This does up a little water and with a handful of moss proceeds to scour and rinse alternately on every dirty dish until the camp culinary furniture shines like a brand-new pin.

I used to be skeptical about the cleanliness of this process, but it will certainly scour a frying-pan that has had grease burned in it until it is as bright as new; so it is really better than soap and warm water and my experience has been that men do not really object to dish-washing in camp provided they are asked to do it and then taught how to do it.

Staying at home is largely habit, and new habits are easily formed, if one goes about it right. About all that one needs is some one to point out the path of it away, and when one starts in on anything new there is usually enough novelty about it to furnish an excuse for going on.

The beauty of the wilderness is found in its quiet peacefulness, its freedom from restraint and from the requirements of modern social usages.

There is a calm serenity, a strength and restful solidity about the wilderness, even in its most boisterous moods, that quite takes one's breath and builds up a humanity as nothing else will. This is one of the strongest arguments why women should take to the woods, and every woman will gladly become a pilgrim after she finds out, as I have, what a good time the wilderness can be to those who understand how to go back to the first principles and live for a time the wholesome primitive life.

What kind of paint will you use? Can you be sure of getting it? So few paints are reliable—so many are not. It's costly to have paint "chalk-off," fade or peel soon after the bill is paid. Save money and uncertainty by using PORTLAND PAINTS. They have a reputation to uphold, and the makers a name to protect. PORTLAND PAINTS wear equally well on interior work or exposed surfaces. They are durable. Sun, rain and wind cannot blister, wash or fade them. And they are economical to apply. Work easy under the brush and spread evenly. ANDOVER.

Particulars of the Drowning Accident.

Tuesday afternoon, July 25, three boys, Francis Crossman, Cecil Swett and George French went fishing in Ellis river below Merrill's bridge. Half way across the river is a large rock where the boys stood and fished. The water is deep on all sides but shoal enough in one place to wade to it.

George was the first to climb the rock, when he missed his footing and fell into the water. His cousin Cecil sprang in to save him, but both boys were underbrush in which he was lodged and it was difficult to bring him to the surface.

A doctor and nurse were soon on the spot, and worked two hours but in vain.
They took Cecil and Dunning rowed back after George who was in the water 12 feet deep. At the bottom was underbrush in which he was lodged and it was difficult to bring him to the surface.

NORWAY, MAINE

MASON.

Went into the River.

H. H. Hastings of Bethel, who was in town looking after the interest of his pulp business one day recently with his automobile, had a narrow escape from a bad accident. His auto became unmanageable and went over the bank into the river, breaking her arm in two places above the elbow. Mr. Hastings escaped with a good wetting and the pleasure of walking back to Bethel, eight miles.

Edie Tyler is better, able to ride out.
Oscar Mason of South Paris was in town quite recently.

Alton Merrill and wife are staying at present with his mother, Mrs. Lura Merrill.

The remains of John Bean were brought to Bethel Flat for burial last Wednesday.
